Handsome, bright, and quietly distinctive, this Rondout vintage home sits pretty above the street and behind a wooden fence. Passing through the wooden gate gives the approach a pleasing sense of arrival. The interior is bright and airy, with two bedrooms, two full baths, and a brand-new white kitchen. Straight lines, good proportions, and high ceilings make the home open and stylish. Upstairs, a spacious hallway offers room for an office nook, a reading corner, or a little creative landing. On the lower level, a flex room adds useful space for an office, studio, exercise room, guest overflow, or whatever life currently requires. A front porch invites morning coffee or a slow evening pause, while the back deck extends the living space outdoors. The fenced-in yard adds privacy and ease, whether for gardening, pets, or simply enjoying a little breathing room in the city. The Rondout location offers convenient access to Kingston's waterfront, shops, restaurants, and the cultural life that makes this part of town so compelling. A crisp, handsome vintage house with contemporary clarity -- maybe modest in size, but never in character, and carrying just enough romance to make it memorable. A 3D Walkthrough Tour is available in the digital Lookbook or by request.
