236 Glasco Turnpike is a classic 1948 brick Colonial set on an impressive 5.4 acres in Saugerties, offering the kind of space, character, and setting that is increasingly hard to find. Framed by mature old-growth trees and an expansive, level lawn, the property has a stately presence while still feeling warm and approachable. Inside, the three-bedroom, one-and-a-half-bath home retains much of its original character, with hardwood floors, arched openings, a beautiful wood staircase, built-in cabinetry, and a brick fireplace anchoring the main living space. Large windows bring in abundant natural light and overlook the surrounding lawn and mature landscape. The floor plan offers multiple living and gathering spaces, providing plenty of opportunity to update the home while preserving the details that make it special. A massive unfinished basement adds another layer of potential, with substantial space for a future recreation room, gym, workshop, home office, or additional storage. An attached two-car garage provides everyday convenience and even more usable space. Outside is where this property truly separates itself. More than five acres of mostly open, usable land surround the home, with a huge flat yard, established landscaping, and towering trees creating a park-like setting. There's room for gardens, outdoor entertaining, recreation, a pool, or simply the luxury of having this much breathing room around you. Conveniently located between Saugerties and Woodstock with easy access to Kingston, the Hudson River, hiking, skiing, restaurants, shops, and everything the Catskills and Hudson Valley have to offer. With its classic brick architecture, substantial acreage, original character, and tremendous potential, 236 Glasco Turnpike is an opportunity to restore, update, and make a truly special property your own.
